

This paper describes how an object-oriented database can be used to support a web site built with Java technology. It describes the object-oriented database technologies that were used to implement a web application call the Online Grade Book.