DEAD MEN

We name our streets for dead men
Whose lives were accidentally
Electrified by cryptic currents of Circumstance and time flowing
Freely through an open circuit.

We name our highways for abstract principles
That have no meaning or purpose,
Save to separate one ideology or Community from an opposing force,
Labeling our highways by number.

We name our children for selfishness
Hoping to capture the aura of Ourselves for just another lifetime
Because we have no heroes and no meanings,
Only dead men and abstract principles. LJC

LONDA

Because I went resolutely home
Hurt showing only behind green eyes,
Because I have taken those long walks
Scrunching buds of pain beneath my sandals,
Because I have disguised loneliness as Cleanliness and unflagging devotion,
Because I maintained that shinginess
Hoping that clouds would blow gently away,
Because I have given up so much of myself
By giving up childish games and pasttimes,
Because I have quit talking about my perfection
Knowing that just being me was good enough,
Because I have learned to see the imperfect me
Accepting the beginnings of my selfhood,
Because I have done this greening and growing
Alone and have been afraid to ask for help,
Because I have hurt so silently and Tried to not need touch and love from others,
I cry these tears. LJC

SKYSCRAPER

I stood beside a towering wall
That reached into the sky
And standing there I felt so small
Too weak to even try
To think of how that wall was built
By hands
The same as mine. AR

Life, so full is mine...glorious!

Am I slipping in more than my share? EM

A Nickle Candy Bar (an ode to a vending machine)

A song by Rags, written on the 3rd floor of the Bayou Bldg

I hate to pay a quarter for a nickle candy bar
And sixty cents a gallon makes me want to park my car
I don't mind spending money but that's taking it too far
When you have to pay a quarter for a nickle candy bar

The nickle Butterfinger went the way of nickle beer
And a nickle Coca Cola hasn't been around for years
A nickle cup of coffee costs at least a dime or more
And they put up brand new signs on all the five and ten cent stores

Some people say inflation is an economic scheme
But when I pay my grocery bill it makes me want to scream
The rising cost of living is about to blow my mind
And when I get a raise I just get more and more behind

I don't know who's the villain but it's mighty plain to see Somebody's making money and it isn't you or me
They say it might get better but I bet it never will So help me drown my sorrows, can you spare a dollar bill?
