

Stonewares

Stonewares were very popular with early settlers. These hardy, serviceable vessels needed no decoration or glaze to seal the clay but often were glazed both inside and out. Stonewares were used for crocks; churns; jugs; and bottles for ink, beer, and spring water.