March 2014: Report to the Community

"Like a good neigghhhhhborrrr..." You know the rest. The ad tune comes to mind quickly. On March 27, President Staples will celebrate and thank university partners and neighbors as he highlights the past year and provides a glimpse into what is to come at University of Houston-Clear Lake. He will share these insights at the annual President's Report to the Community. As is the university's tradition, the president will spotlight and acknowledge a special partner/neighbor who has helped the university significantly, and he will present that company with the President's Community Partners Award.

It can be a challenge to determine who should be singled out above the rest. The university is fortunate to have so many organizations and businesses that support UHCL's vision in myriad ways, including financial support, volunteers, promotion of the university in various ways and more. This year's recipient has claimed UHCL as part of its family like we have claimed it as part of ours:

ExxonMobil Baytown. We're more than neighbors; we're partners. ExxonMobil Baytown's involvement has been consistent for many years, and they have played an important role in several strategic projects. They often choose projects that have a specific benefit to their Baytown-area family, too, particularly Goose Creek Consolidated Independent School District.

Whether the initiative has been preparing tomorrow's teachers, developing math skills or helping teach others about the environment, ExxonMobil Baytown has been a steadfast friend. Like a good neighbor...they have been there.
